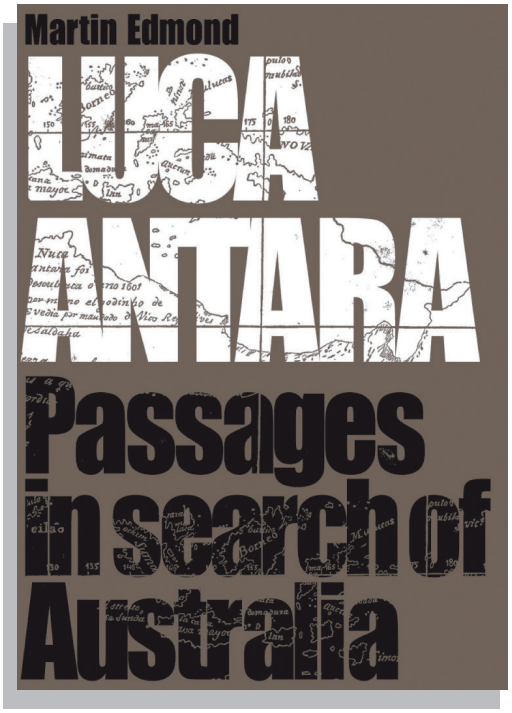
LUCA ANTARA

Passages in Search of Australia

by Martin Edmond



Australia was imagined before it became real and its past still reads like a series of inventions. Luca Antara explores fault lines in this early history at the same time as it mines equally ambiguous rifts in literary culture and autobiography. The quest takes us to the far Marquesas, Paris at the time of the Commune, the Portugal of the Fátima revelations, 17th century Dutch fatalities on Houtmans Abrolhos and the mysterious first Portuguese voyages into northern Australia, one of which, by António da Nova, is retraced first in words, then across land and sea. Meanwhile the locus of these inquiries remains contemporary Sydney and environs, where the narrative begins and ends. At once memoir, history, fable, and travel book, Luca Antara is indescribable and inimitable, exquisitely written, an enigma and a delight.

"Luca Antara is a remarkable and original book written under the spell of a city, Sydney, and of a country, Australia; a book written under the spell of an idea, discovery; and finally under the spell of several fascinating compulsions - to search, enquire, dream, and to travel." Roger McDonald, author of The Ballad of Desmond Kale.
